

Salt May Save the Soft Corn

Salt will save the soft corn according to the investigation and testimony of the James E. Bennett Co., commission merchants of Chicago, which has been published in some of the country newspapers in Stark county, Illinois. A copy of the Stark County News containing the following article, which may be helpful to the farmers came into our hands last week.

We always knew that salt contains preservative qualities but we did not know before that it was a preservative of soft corn. We learn that several are using it to good effect and our readers will no doubt read with interest the investigation of the James E. Bennett Co., in their own words as follows:

"Having learned that salt was being used to preserve soft corn in Whiteside county, Illinois, we instructed our traveling man to investigate. He reports as follows:

"Accompanied by an experienced grain dealer I investigated thoroughly the use of salt for preservation of soft corn in the vicinity of Prophetstown, Whiteside county, Illinois. We found numerous places where corn was being salted or had been salted. We interviewed many experienced farmers on the subject and acquired the following interesting information. T. J. Marshall, a large successful farmer, residing about one and a half miles south of Prophetstown, gives us the following data: In 1881, the year in which so many farmers experimented with large yellow seed corn from Kansas, it was found that this corn did not mature. Mr. Marshall informs us that while cribbing corn that year, an elderly German, John Liphart, advised him to salt his soft corn. Liphart stated that this method of preservation had been adopted in Germany and Sweden, the climate not being adapted to maturing corn. Marshall adopted the German's suggestion, operating under his direction to use from 2 to 2 1/2 barrels of salt for each 1,000 bushels of corn, that is equivalent to about 10 quarts of salt to each ordinary wagon load of ear corn, salt being sprinkled over the corn as it was being placed in the crib. Mr. Marshall states the experiment was a pronounced success. Corn which he cribbed early without salt that year was lost. The crib that was salted came out as dry as a bone, just as bright as it went in and absolutely free from mold and rot though light in weight due to the moisture drawn from the corn by the action of the salt. The process was used from time to time but was again extensively used with the soft corn crop two years ago, 1915. Mr. Marshall induced his neighbors to salt their soft corn and informs us the result was highly satisfactory, resulting in many converts. This year these same farmers and many recruits to the method are applying the salt. Practically the entire stock of the common barrel salt in this vicinity was exhausted. E. J. Mathis, of the Mathis Bros. Co., grain dealers at Prophetstown and other points, said his firm had sold several carloads of salt for this corn crop. Local farmers seem to have accepted the salting process and adopted it into their regular method of farming, claiming it has been thoroughly tested on previous occasions and found effective and highly satisfactory. In addition to interviewing farmers who were using the method we were particularly interested in our visit with Albert Bessire, a big farmer. He showed us one crib of 1000 bushels of new corn which had been treated with salt. Mr. Bessire removed one of the crib slats and we took out sufficient corn to penetrate an arm's length. We found the corn very cool, in fact, cooler than the outside temperature, perfectly sweet, but of course wet. This corn had been in the crib several days. It is further stated that corn cribbed with salt passes thru the winter in its soft or green state drying only with the coming of spring wind and rising temperature. It is claimed that soft corn absolutely does not heat. We have looked into the matter carefully and are convinced the process has sufficient merit to justify a thorough investigation, not only by the individual but by the Agricultural Department. It is stated that the corn comes out in the spring practically free from any taste of salt.

"The richer households send good things to the poor, and everywhere among both rich and poor are the animals and birds remembered, says Our Dumb Animals. The boys and girls save up their pennies during the year for this purpose. Sheaves of grain are fastened to the window ledges in town, and in the country the sheaves are fastened to long poles and renewed every day for a week, and many are the birds that spy this feast. On the barn floors of the peasants bowls of oat porridge are set for poor 'Robin Goodfellow' to comfort him because he has no 'soul.' The cows and the horses share in the general happiness by having a double share of food given them.

It is a big skip from the northland to the southland or tropical countries where Christmas is celebrated without the evergreen tree to decorate and hang gifts on. In Brazil the holiday may be spent outdoors in the sunny flower scented air.

They have quaint superstitions in these summer lands relative to Yuletide. On the coffee plantations the old folk say that on Christmas night the animals have the gift of speech and that if only a child has sufficient courage to go out alone after dark it will hear on the stroke of 12 the cock crow in a loud, clear voice from his highest perch.

"Christo nascen"—Christ is born. The bull in a deep, sonorous bass inquires from a distant field, "Onde"—where?

The sheep then answer in chorus, "Em Belem de Juda"—in Bethlehem of Juden.

In turn all the domestic animals give to the world the glad tidings of the Nativity. Many a child wishes it had the courage necessary to enable him to spend midnight outdoors and hear this wonderful conversation of the brute creation.

How Animals Figure In Christmas Customs

THE Christmas customs in Norway and Sweden are the most interesting of any country. It is time of great rejoicing. To show that there are friendly feelings between every one in the household the shoes are placed in a row in the hall when retiring on Christmas eve, and, like the German custom, candles are left burning in the village windows all night to light the way for "Kristine," who brings the gifts. The Christmas tree is largely decorated with candles and pretty cakes arranged in bright colored baskets, all usually home made.

The richer households send good things to the poor, and everywhere among both rich and poor are the animals and birds remembered, says Our Dumb Animals. The boys and girls save up their pennies during the year for this purpose. Sheaves of grain are fastened to the window ledges in town, and in the country the sheaves are fastened to long poles and renewed every day for a week, and many are the birds that spy this feast. On the barn floors of the peasants bowls of oat porridge are set for poor "Robin Goodfellow" to comfort him because he has no "soul." The cows and the horses share in the general happiness by having a double share of food given them.

Christmas Pie Has Long Family History

HAPPY the Christmas reveler who has a digestion to tackle the Christmas pie. The modern fad-diet in diet is trying to rule out the plum pudding and the mince from the Christmas feast.

Shame on him! Better a night of groaning to the few than a ban on a time honored custom for the many. Lay in a stock of soda mint, pepsi and salt water. Be sporty and take chances on the plummy goody.

First it was old Santa under a ban—a dreary world it would be without Santa Claus—now it is the toothsome Christmas pie bulging with raisins, flaky of crust and redolent of burning brandy.

Truly the modern progressive who lives by rule is akin to the old Puritan to whom the Christmas pie was an abominationavoring of heresy. Indeed the Roundhead had more excuse for his abstinence; it was a test of orthodoxy. He felt his morals would be injured by eating a pie whose savory contents were typical of offerings of the Magi and whose form was often that of a manger.

The Christmas pie is of ancient and honorable lineage, and its name of "mince pie" came centuries later, being given in derision by the Puritans. Are we such weaklings that what our ancestors have thrived on for centuries will slay us in one eating? Surely the stomach specialist, that product of modernity, must have slipped up.

Our grandparents did not eat one measly little slice of the Christmas pie in fear and trembling. Boldly they swallowed huge hunks, not on Christmas day only, but during the entire season of Christmas, unto Twelfth Night. Was it not writ, "As many different houses as thou shalt eat mince pie during Christmastide so many happy months shalt thou have during the year?"

And they began the mixing of that Christmas pie early and with great ceremony. It was a gala occasion when the plum pudding was to be stirred and each member of the household down to the infant in arms must have a turn at the spoon.—Philadelphia Press.

In the Days of '61-'65.

"Christmas mornings in the Civil war days," says the veteran, "were generally spent in reading letters. After dinner the men indulged in sports, particularly prize fights, and then in the evening they gathered together and sang the wartime songs and told stories of the Christmases before the fighting began. It wasn't all chorus soloists in the line, and our company actors showed their abilities by reciting or rehearsing the plays they had seen while on furloughs."
